full measure of the relief it had striven for, concerning the tariff. In this very important instance, Calhoun may have been wiser than President Jackson, who opposed Nullification; yet was as unmindful of the "severity of the shock to the manufacturers," as the members of the South Carolina Nullification Convention were; but it is difficult to see clearly how "South Carolina led Calhoun." If so, it was after she had been hobbled, by him.

With that episode passed, we reach the active movement for intra state rail-road development, and the differing appeals of Hayne and Calhoun and the arrival of Rhett. This period and on has been treated as fully by two writers beyond our borders, John G. Van Deusen and Laura White, as the earlier period was by Verner W. Crane, and from them and S. M. Derrick and other sources, the author draws much, in his very full an enlightening discussion of the agricultural, industrial, artistic, educational and political development of South Carolina up to Secession in 1860; from which he passes into a recital of the part played by South Carolina in the War of Secession and on to the Reconstruction, still fresh in the memory of many.

Without reviewing this portion at the length its importance requires it might be said, that to the average reader the work is less impressive than the treatment of the earlier period. It is true in compact form he gives his readers much information and his estimate of the men of the period, considering all the circumstances, is historically helpful. Hampton's greatness is stressed and Perry, Tillman, McCrady and others shown to be more than prominent; but the space allowed is too small and the number of individuals too great, to permit an author to present them with sufficient fullness to satisfy the readers, among whom there still may be not a few inclined to think, if not to declare, like the great Æneas: "All of which I saw and part of which I was."

But to this reviewer the work seems very free from prejudice and marked by a deep love for all portions of the State and her people, coupled with a sincere desire and courageous determination to give the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, as he sees it. And if there are omissions, where can be found a history in which there are none. It is a book which cannot fail to be of great benefit to South Carolinians and also to not a few beyond our borders.

THE SPANIARDS AND THE ENGLISH SETTLEMENT IN CHARLES TOWN

By JOSÉ MIGUEL GALLARDO

Professor of Romance Languages, College of Charleston

This paper presents a translation of Spanish documents dealing with the English settlement in Charles Town. In addition to revealing the attitude of the Spaniards towards the settlement, they contain precious bits of information on Charles Town obtained from eye-witnesses. The testimonies preserved in these records throw light on the population, fortifications, land and sea forces, trade relations, agricultural and industrial development, and other features of life in the English colony. While facts of this nature are often overlooked in historical works of a wide geographical range, and while at first sight such facts may seem to be of interest only to those who engage in studies of a regional scope, nevertheless, since Charles Town in due time played a prominent part in the extension of the English domains in the Southeast, the contents of these documents cannot be ignored by students interested in the colonial history of the United States.

The reader must bear in mind that the English had succeeded in planting a permanent settlement in Charles Town in April 1670; and that the treaty of 1670,¹ intended to settle, once and for an active and ever acceptable contributor to the lectures, essays, &c., of the "Literary and Philosophical Society," and, in the course of an essay on capital punishment before that society, introduced that graphic sketch of an execution, which was selected to represent his power of authorship in the "Charleston Book."

The good, and the gifted, and the great, who lived and toiled in the past generation for the honor and glory of our city and commonwealth in social, moral, intellectual and aesthetic efforts, found John Blake White a zealous assistant.

Gentle in life, he has gently passed away in ripe and honored age.

give advice of the situation on the French or Spanish borders. Not infrequently a delegation of Indian chiefs come down to treat of peace, lent another touch of color to the annual pageant of the southern wilderness. Elsewhere in the English colonies only Albany could show such scenes."

The policy of the Colony in using the friendly Indians to protect their frontier against the Spaniards and hostile tribes is set forth at length. For years the Yemassee settled between Port Royal and Savannah were close allies. They were the most loyal to Barnwell in his North Carolina Campaign. For the first time is the origin of the Yemassee war clearly stated. The vigorous conduct of Gov. Craven, with the assistance of Capt. Chicken, Barnwell and other Indian fighters, in the successful battles which he fought is shown. The opinion is expressed that the friendly conduct of the Cherokee Indians secured the peace in the end.

The story goes at length into the efforts of the Proprietors to maintain their rights to their property in the colony and the successful efforts of the revolted Province to checkmate the manoeuvres of the opposition.

Chapter XIII is given up to the true story of the settlement of Georgia. The accepted account by the historians of that state is that it was owing to the benevolence of Oglethorpe aided, of course, by the English Government. The author shows where at least a part of the funds came from, and who were the benevolent people who were the chief support of the General. No one could properly now write the history of early Georgia without an examination of the author's work.

We close by saying that the book is well printed, that there are attached a map drawn from original sources, an exhaustive bibliography and a good index.

CORRESPONDENCE OF HENRY LAURENS

Annotated by JOSEPH W. BARNWELL

The letters of Henry Laurens which we have been publishing (This Mag., vols. 28-30) cover an important period in his life, the period between his return from England to Charleston, June 3, 1747, three days after the death of his father, and his departure from Charleston for England November 9, 1748, with a view to a partnership with James Crokatt of London under whom he had learned his business there.

The letters are convincing proof of the capacity of Laurens as a man of business. It was his first experience in business by himself, and connected with his own business was the winding up of the estate of his father, John Laurens, requiring much of his time, and care. As he was expecting to return to England, and to enter into close relations with Mr. Crokatt to whom the majority of the letters were addressed, his eye was naturally fixed upon that prospect and this would restrain the freedom which he afterwards showed in doing business alone and aloof from the possible criticism of his expected superior.

During the whole of this period the war of the Austrian Succession was still going on in Europe and America, closing in October 1748. It was a time of great prosperity in the Province of South Carolina. The downfall of Charles Edward Stuart (The Young Pretender) in his campaign in Scotland in 1746, had relieved Eng-

MARRIAGE AND DEATH NOTICES FROM THE CITY-GAZETT AND DAILY ADVERTISER

Copied by ELIZABETH HEYWARD JERVEY

Married, on the 25th of December last, Mr. Daniel Bird, of Edgefield, South-Carolina, to the amiable Miss Sarah Oliver, of Petersburg, Georgia. (Monday, January, 12, 1807.)

Married, on Sunday evening last, by the Rev. Mr. Munds, Mr. James Watson, to Mrs. Mary Cameron.

Died, at Sierra Leon, (Africa) in October last, Mr. Francis Marlen, of this city. To his aged parents, and an affectionate wife and family, his loss is irreparable. (Thursday, January 15, 1807.)

A jury of inquest was held on Thursday evening last, at the Marine Hospital, upon the body of Oluff Gronning, one of the crew of the ship Cleopatra, James Butman, master; and R. F. Lawson, supercargo; which arrived in this port on Sunday last, with a cargo of slaves, from Africa. The following is their verdict:

"That the deceased, Oluff Gronning, came to his death by the cruel and ill treatment of captain Butman and R. V. Lawson, by severe beatings, and particularly by Mr. Lawson stabbing him under the left arm with the tormentors, or cook's fork, it having entered the throat, by which he languished and died.—There being also the marks of eight blows inflicted on his arms, hand and feet, and said to be inflicted by said Lawson, with a billet of fire wood, and the pumpbolt on board said vessel."

Another of the crew died on Thursday evening last. A jury of inquest held morning, brought in the following verdict:

"Daniel Meyer, a native of Denmark, a mariner on board the ship Cleopatra capt. J. Butman, and R. V. Lawson, supercargo, came to his death from the cruel and ill treatment, wounds and bruises, particularly by the captain twisting and bruising his right arm, from which a mortification took place; and a number of bruises on his arms and legs, which deprived him of the use of them, inflicted by Mr. Lawson and the captain jointly, on board, of which he died in the Marine Hospital on Thursday evening last." (Saturday, January 17, 1807.)

Died at Nassau on the 5th of January, Miss Mary Wells, eldest daughter of late highly esteemed John Wells, esq. formerly proprietor of the Bahama Gazette. The loss of this young lady to her relatives in Charleston, who she left in the bloom of health a few days ago, will be felt with poignant regret. Her friends in this country do justice by their grief to her amiable disposition good sense and accomplishments; while we lament the painful task of recording her early fate. (Monday, Jan. 19, 1807.)

Died, in this city, on Thursday last, in the 77th year of her age, Mrs. Elizabeth Neufville, widow of the late John Neufville, esq. A lady, whose real goodness will long endear her memory to her descendants, and gained her the esteem of all who knew her. (Wednesday, January 21, 1807.)

Married, at St. Philip's Church, on the 22d instant, by the Rev. Doctor Jenkins, the Reverend James Dewar Simons, to Miss Harleston Corbett, daughter of Thomas Corbett, esq.

Married, on Thursday evening, by the Rev. Mr. Munds, Mr. John Williams Allen, to the amiable Miss Eliza Hibben, both of Christ Church parish.

Departed this life, on Thursday last, Mr. George Drennis, sincerely regretted by his friends and acquaintances. He was a truly honest, upright and industrious man, and for many years past a respectable inhabitant of this city.

Died, on the 15th of November last, in Laurens district, Mrs. Ann Newby, at the advanced age of 112 years. Until within a few months before her death, she was able to transact the business of her house. She has left her husband, Mr. Robert Newby, only 37 years of age, together with a numerous train of acquaintances, to lament her loss. (Saturday, January 24, 1807.)

On Friday last, a Jury of Inquest was held on the body of John Shoemaker, a Polander, Patroon of a small Schooner belonging to Stono. It appeared that the deceased was a very good, honest man—that getting into company in a small house in Queen street, on Wednesday evening, by some slight of hand or legerdemain, he lost a valuable watch intrusted to his care to deliver to a gentleman at Stono, his employer—the loss of which so preyed upon his mind, and not being able to hear of the watch or to recover it, he on Thursday evening, very deliberately took an ounce of Laudanum, and shook hands with all the people present and wished them well—saying, he was going a long journey, and bid them farewell, and laid himself down on a bed. Shortly afterwards he was seized with convulsive fits—a surgeon was sent for who administered medicine, and at length brought him so much too, as to be able to speak, and recollect the persons round him, but appeared very angry that any body should trouble him, saying he had made his peace with God and wished to die; that his mind was troubled about the loss of the watch; that he had not made away with it.*

On Monday, the 26th ult. Miss Cross, the only daughter of captain George Cross, late of the American navy, departed this life, in the 19th year of her age. The endearing manners, mild temper, domestic virtues, and well cultivated mind, of this amiable young lady, would, of themselves, have been sufficient to render her death an uncommonly distressing calamity to her unhappy parents and relatives; but the dreadful accident which brought on her painful and untimely dissolution, must aggravate the poignancy of their affliction. She had gone on a visit to St. Peter's Parish, where, on the 21st ult. her clothes accidentally took fire—Enveloped in flames, she was terrified to such a degree, that she ran from room to room, and finally jumped through a window in the lower story of the house, before she could be arrested. By this injudicious flight, (attributable altogether to her state of distraction) she was so much burnt, before she received any effectual assistance, that she languished in torment, till she sunk into a happy eternity. (Monday, February 2, 1807.)

forty-nine years; he was an affectionate husband, a sincere friend and was always ready to relieve those that were in distress, (Wednesday, Feb. 18, 1807.)

Died, in Washington city, on Sunday morning, at 4 o'clock, the 1st inst. of a pulmonick disease, Brigadier General Levi Casey, of South Carolina, in the fifty-ninth year of his age.

The fatal illness of this amiable gentleman was but short duration; his closing moments were passed with that serenity which arises from the reflection of a well spent life; his last breath was drawn with a calmness resulting only from true fortitude and virtue.

Early in the revolutionary war, General Casey received the command of a company, with which he gallantly assisted at the siege of Savannah, in the attempt made by the Americans and French, to storm the British works. He was afterwards distinguished as a brave and prudent officer in the battles of Rocky Mount, Hanging-Rock, Musgroves, King's Mountain, Fishdamford, Blackstocks, and at the Cowpens, where he performed very important services to General Morgan. Through the whole war he enjoyed, as a brave and valuable officer, and applause, friendship and confidence of General Sumpter.

During many years after the close of that war, in which his conduct was so important and successful, he represented Newberry district in the state legislature, both in the Senate and House of Representatives, and was at the time of his death, on the fourth term of service in Congress, a representative from South Carolina.

The friends and family of no man have more cause to lament a loss of this kind, than those of General Casey; for in sweetness and equanimity of temper, he was equalled by few; in the tenderness of affection, and domestic ties, surpassed by none. He was from the commencement of the revolution, a uniform patriot; he has left behind him, the surest testimony of public confidence and private worth, the universal love of his neighbours. Painful as the regrets of his family must be they will derive some consolation from the marked respect which was paid to his funeral by the national legislature. In this too, will the old revolutionary soldier participate; because, he will see in it, the memory of the brave is not forgotten.

The following is the order of procession as it moved from the capitol.

1. Marine Corps.
2. Chaplains of Congress.
3. Ministers.
4. Physicians.
5. Corpse.
6. Pall bearers, (six Generals).
7. Mourners.
8. Speaker, preceded by the sergeant at arms, and followed by the Clerk.
9. Members of the House of Representatives.
10. President of the senate, preceded by the sergeant at arms, and followed by the secretary.
11. Members of the Senate.
12. Heads of Departments and officers thereof.
13. Citizens.

When the procession arrived at Rock-creek, it was formed on foot, (two and two) the carriages following behind, and preceded in that manner to the grove. The speaker of the House of Representatives, the President of the Senate, and the Pall-bearers, with white scarfs over the right shoulder and white gloves. The chaplains of Congress and other ministers, with white scarfs over the right shoulder and round the hat and white gloves. The sergeants at arms, Clerk of the House, and Secretary of the Senate, with white scarf over the right shoulder only. The members of the House of Representatives, with black crape on the left arm. (Thursday Feb. 19, 1807.)

Died, at New-Brunswick, New-Jersey, col. John Bayard, in the sixty-ninth year of his age. We should be wanting in our duty, were we to pass over this afflicting event without expressing our deep sense of the loss society has sustained by the death of this most excellent man,—Thro' the whole course of his useful life, col. Bayard afforded a bright example of those virtues which adorn and dignify human nature.—In the various offices and stations which he filled, whether political, charitable or religious, he was uniformly influenced by pure patriotism, genuine benevolence and integrity, and rational piety.*—New-Jersey paper.

Eulogy has, most generally, been bestowed only upon those heroes of our revolutionary war, who led our armies to battle—while the poor war-worn soldier, who fought in the ranks, has been suffered to go down to the grave without notice. The death of Major Joseph Dickinson, which was announced in last Wednesday's Courier brought this fact to my recollection. Being an old friend of the Major, I have presumed to proclaim to the world how much of his worth I know. In his early years, when the din of arms resounded through his native state, and all her sons rushed to the tented field to assist in the great cause of procuring their country's independence, young Dickinson caught the fire of patriotism, and joined his countrymen, as a private dragoon, I believe, under the command of General Marion. He was in several battles, in one of which, he was cut down from his horse by a British dragoon, having received two wounds on his head, and as many on his thigh, and lost one of his fingers. After the contest was over, he was found in a ditch among the dying and the dead, and was conveyed to the British hospital, a prisoner. When the Indians became troublesome upon our borders, he was commissioned as a Lieutenant in the 2d regiment of the Federal army, and was attached to the company raised in this city by the gallant Roberts. He was afterwards stationed at the Rock Landing, on the south-western frontiers of Georgia, and received the appointment of Paymaster, in which he continued to officiate until he was promoted to the command of a company. He continued in the Federal army about eight years. After he returned to this city, his fellow-citizens, who had not forgotten his services, appointed him to take care of Fort Mechanick, and he obtained from the collector of the Customs, the office of Export Inspector, After the death of Captain Davis, he was appointed to the command of the City-Guard; and on the resignation of Major Reid, he was appointed Brigade Inspector of the 7th Brigade of the militia of this state.—As a soldier, he was brave and generous; as a friend affectionate and sincere; as a husband and a father he was indulgent and kind, and as a member of society, he was deserving and useful. His temper was warm and irascible, but the goodness of his heart soon overcame those emotions which had overleaped the usual bounds of reason. (Courier.) (Friday, March 13, 1807.)

HISTORICAL NOTES

MORE ON LANDGRAVE SMITH'S FAMILY

By A. S. Salley, Jr.

In the issue of this Magazine for July, 1927, I presented three wills of relatives of the first Landgrave Smith on his mother's side and discussed the import of certain records previously discovered in England by Mrs. Wade Hampton Perry, who was in England at the time of the publication of the article. While on that visit Mrs. Perry made some additional discoveries that almost clear up the uncertainties. Among baptismal records at Chard, Somerset, were:

Barbara, daughter of Aaron Atkins, September 12, 1650.

John Atkins, son of Aaron, April 7, 1653.

Aaron Atkins, son of Aaron and Joane, July 17, 1656.

Richard Atkins, son of Aaron, May 10, 1660.

Joanna Atkins, daughter of Aaron and Joane, June 5, 1663.

Richard, son of Aaron and Joane Atkins, August 27, 1666.

Among burial records at Chard were: Aaron Atkins, March 27, 1670, and Richard Atkins, July, 1672.

In the will of Aaron Atkins, which I included in the contribution above alluded to, he mentions his brother John in Chard and his sister Joanna; his "brother in Law," or "Deare brother," Thomas Smith and nephews Thomas and George Smith, which appears to establish the fact that these records found by Mrs. Perry apply to the same Atkins people who came to South Carolina with Landgrave Smith in 1684. The baptismal records of Barbara and John Atkins simply say "daughter of Aaron Atkins" and "son of Aaron Atkins" while the records for Aaron, Richard and Joanna say "son of Aaron and Joane" and "daughter of Aaron and Joane." The elder Aaron appears to have died in 1670. The theory which I offered in my previous paper that Joan Atkins, daughter of John Atkins, of Chard, first married Thomas Smith by whom she had a son Thomas (the future landgrave and governor of South Carolina); that her husband died (about 1650) and that (about 1655) she married Aaron Atkins, a widower with a daughter Barbara and

The group of letters published in this issue will complete the Middleton correspondence. They are of less importance than those already published inasmuch as we have more information (from Drayton's Memoirs and elsewhere) with regard to the period just before the Revolutionary War in South Carolina, than we have of the period just before its close. It was difficult for men who had received their education in England, or whose connections in mercantile life with that kingdom were large, to understand how a movement begun as a protest against the action of a Tory Government could result in throwing off all allegiance to the British Crown and in the end in an alliance with France. Men like Henry Laurens, thoroughly acquainted with English sentiment, could scarcely believe that a Government so lately administered under the guiding genius of Pitt could display so little common sense in dealing with American discontent. Yet, so it was.

The views of moderate men bent upon obtaining concessions from Parliament were soon out of place amid riots and disorders which were seemingly justified by disregard of American feelings, by threats of force and punishment in proceedings unusual in English law and in the dispatch of armed fleets and soldiers from England. Died, at his Plantation on Pudding Swamp, in the lower part of Clarendon County, adjoining the County of Williamsburgh, on the second day of October instant, Mr. John Burgess, planter, in the 58th year of his age. He was a native of the County of Down in Ireland, and came into this state about the year 1750. Being a warm friend to Liberty and the Natural Rights of Mankind, he zealously cooperated in the cause of independence, with his property and counsel, as well as his personal and family services. To mankind he was conscientious and benevolent, and to God he was pious without ostentation. For upwards of half a century he was connected with the original Presbyterian Church of Williamsburgh in this state, who, as well as his numerous friends and acquaintances in the neighbourhood, and community in general, will long lament the loss of so worthy and respectable a member of civil and religious society. Possessed of strong mental faculties, an unclouded understanding and a sound judgment, he was very useful by his prudent counsel and conversation in stemming the progress of infidelity and enthusiasm, both of which extremes have lately prevailed too much in the United States, to the injury of the morals of mankind, the peace and safety of civil government, and the cause of christianity. He retained the vigor of his mind to the last; his eyes were not dim, nor his natural force abated; and when the hour of his dissolution arrived, he departed this life with calm and tranquil resignation to the will of heaven, believing in a glorious resurrection, and hoping for a blessed immortality. “Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, for they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them." (Tuesday, Oct. 18, 1803)

Gentlemen

I had the honor of writing you y^e 5 march and sent you two copies thereof wherein you'll observe y^e then prospect I had of speedily compleating the business I was sent to Europe on But y^e loss y^e trade this kingdom met with, y^e reports from England of the success of their troops in Georgia with Count D'Estaing's situation damped y^e spirit of those in trade so much that I could procure no credit from them excepting about one hundred thousand livres from the house at Nantes that was to do all y^e business, my chief dependance for money being those in Trade I was not a little chagrined at this. However I then determined to apply to government and went to Paris where M^r Franklin introduced me by letter to M^r de Sartine who heard my proposals and desired me to state them to him in writing which I immediately did as follows

To lend me y^e money y^e State of South Carolina authorised me to borrow in Europe

To join me in y^e security ye State had given me if monies were to be procured in any other place.

To sell me three of their Frigates ready for sea payable here in two and five years with Interest or pay-
