it is said, no more than one mill on five hundred thousand pounds has hitherto been applied, leaving in the Treasury a balance of three millions five hundred thousand pounds. The first instalment of the subsidy, is immediately to be conveyed to Gottenburgh in the Quebec frigate.

The Austrian Emperor has been summoned by the French General Montesquieu, to declare himself for or against France, as his neutrality could be no longer respected: The answer of his being determined to maintain his neutrality has been sent to Warsaw, by General Vincent. The same demand has been made of the Courts of Denmark and Sweden. The latter rejected it with becoming disdain; the former seems to temporise.—Count Barnstorff, the Danish Prime Minister of State, has obtained from Napoleon, the Order of the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The Paris papers state, that Louis XVIII. or as Bonaparte has been pleased to call him, the Count de Lisle, has been driven out of his asylum at Krew, in Russian Poland, and is now on his way to Moscow.

The Emperor Napoleon is said to have sold to the King of Holland, the cities of Hamburg, Lubec and Bremen, on condition of his receiving a certain annual tribute.

By the latest accounts from Spain, it appears that the Spanish government has been compelled by a peremptory mandate from France, to prohibit the sending of any wool to this Country, as has been the practice during the present, as well as former wars. The same prohibition, we find, by one of the late French papers, has been issued in the kingdom of Italy, against the exportation of raw silk to this country.

The 25th of February, is appointed the day of General Fast in England, and the 26th in Scotland.

LIVERPOOL, January 21.

RE-CAPTURE OF BUENOS-AYRES.

The Princess Elizabeth Packet, capt. Foresdale, arrived at Falmouth on the 15th inst. with mails from Malta and Gibraltar, 15 days from the latter. On the 31st ult. while the Packet was with Lord Collingwood's fleet, a heavy firing was heard in the direction of Cadiz, which continued for six hours; the cause was not known; but it was supposed that the in shore squadron was engaged with the batteries. Lord Collingwood sent a letter to capt. Foresdale, of which the following is a copy:

Ocean, Jan. 1, 1807, off Cadiz.

SIR—His Majesty's brig the Beagle, yesterday captured a Spanish schooner, from Monte Video, in the Rio de la Plata, by which intelligence was received, that the Spaniards, on the 12th of August, re-captured Buenos Ayres, making Gen. Beresford and his army prisoners of war.

I have to desire you will please to give this information to every man of war you may be spoken by on your passage to England, and also such English ships as you may have any communication with. I am, &c.

COLLINGWOOD.

To the Commander of the Packet.

The schooner taken by the Beagle, is said to have on board 160,000 dollars. We have no mention of Sir Home Popham's squadron.

The intelligence from the Continent, relative to the operations of the armies in Poland, is of a nature so very fluctuating and contradictory, that no reliance whatever can be placed upon it. The different articles of which it consists are said to have been brought by vessels and boats from the French and Dutch coasts; but they differ most materially, some representing the French as victorious, and others stating the success of the Russians to have been decisive. In this dilemma, when we have no authority to accredit but the reports of masters of vessels, we shall not trespass upon the good sense of our readers by giving the various accounts at length.

Dispatches are said to have reached the Admiralty on Saturday night, communicating the arrival of the Carrier cutter from off the Texel, at Yarmouth on Friday last. She is said to have join the army in Poland, was unfemitting; and various articles of stores were forwarded from Mayence, &c. to the same destination.

The Russian division under Gen. Tolstoy, which has joined the Prussians, is stated at 34,000 men only. The army, it appears, has advanced to the Omulef, to sustain the corps of Gen. Benningesen; and the Prussian column has taken a strong position considerably in advance, at Soldau, which they are fortifying.

One of the deputies sent from Hamburg to Bonaparte, and who, from particular intimacy with Talleyrand, had, it is supposed, an opportunity to ascertain with tolerable precision the condition of the French army in Poland, reports, that the French troops, who had, on the 22d of December, crossed the Oder, amounted to 200,000 men; and that the sick in the hospital at that time exceeded 17,000; subsequent accounts represent the sick to have increased to nearly 30,000.

BRITISH HOUSE OF LORDS.

WEDNESDAY, January 14.

On Wednesday General Gascoyne wished to know from Lord Howick, whether the American Non-Importation Act against this country had undergone any alteration. He addressed himself to the noble Lord for such explanation as might make it generally known if the trade could be resumed with safety; or if it was still attended with all its recent hazard of confiscation, in order that, if there was no risk the benefit of the trade should be enjoyed universally; and if there was risk that no individual should want warning to avoid it.

Lord Howick said, that if the treaty concluded recently should be ratified, as there was every reason to expect it would, the Non-Importation Act would be repealed of course, and all proceedings had under it would be reversed. This was all the information he could give. He had also now to state that there certainly was in this treaty a full restoration to his Majesty of the right to exercise restrictions equivalent to those which neutral nations may submit to allow the enemy to exercise by their means, against the commerce of his majesty's subjects.

Her Prussian Majesty, we fear, has fallen a victim to numerous calamities which have lately been accumulated upon her house. She was attacked by a nervous fever, the consequence of excessive anxiety and fatigue, against which, unfortunately, the delicate frame of that high spirited woman was not proof.

W. FAWKENER.

LONDON, January 6.

Sir Harding Jones has brought the latest accounts to government from the head-quarters of the Russian armies. He had a full opportunity of seeing them with his own eyes, and upon his authority it is stated, that he never saw an army in a higher state of discipline, better appointed in every respect, or more eager to meet the enemy a l'arme blanche. The two columns of Russians under general Benningsen and Buxhoyden, amounting in all to 150,000 men, he says must have joined on the 8th December.

Several letters, dated the 10th of December, have been received from St. Petersburg, which mention, that a strong Russian force, under the command of general Von Essen, had taken possession of Choczin. It is stated, that the Russian general, on his arrival before the place, summoned it to surrender, which was refused: the Russians then began to bombard it, and threatened to take it by storm, and put every man to death found in the garrison. This had the desired effect.

A notice to the following effect was yesterday posted at Lloyd's:—"That the reports received from Lisbon, relative to the re-capture of Buenos Ayres, are such as may make it prudent for English ships bound to the river Plate, to obtain previous information either at Rio Janeiro, or any part of the coast before they enter that river."

January 7.

The Prussians appear to be rallying. Frederick William has addressed a Proclamation to the inhabitants of Silesia, in which he feelingly appeals to their loyalty and patriotism, anticipating the approach of the enemy, and painting in strong colours, the depopulating warfare which he wages against the peaceful inhabitants of every country in which his armies gain a footing. His Majesty's troops being still at the head of a powerful army, urged of traitors, and burning with zeal for the cause of its country, supported by a yet more powerful Ally, determining to revenge his cause.

January 18.

We understand that Subsidiary treaties have been entered into by our Government with the Courts of Russia, Sweden, and Prussia, by which we have engaged to furnish them with five millions sterling, in order to enable them to keep the field against the common enemy. The greater part of this sum, if we are correctly informed, government have the means of immediately transmitting. Towards the close of the last Session of Parliament, a Vote of Credit was Dispatches are said to have reached the Admiralty on Saturday night, communicating the arrival of the Carrier cutter from off the Texel, at Yarmouth on Friday last. She is said to have spoken a vessel on the 14th, from Amsterdam bound to Drontheim, and the master, a Dane, privately stated, that it was understood at Amsterdam, that the French had suffered considerable loss in a partial engagement near Warsaw, which is reported to amount to about 15,000 men, and the combined armies about the same number. That a general engagement was, it is said, shortly expected, as the Russians had been joined by the remaining Prussian forces, and were very numerous.

Rumours prevailed a few days since of a battle having been fought between the French and the Russians, in which the latter were said to have been defeated with very great loss. Saturday three vessels, the Mercury, Aurora, and Blayde, arrived in the Thames from the Baltic; they sailed, we understand, from Elsinneur, with the fleet. Capt. White has brought Bamberg, Frankfort, and other German papers of a later date than those previously received. The Bamberg papers mention the receipt of advices from Warsaw to the 26th of December, at which period two smart actions had been fought between the French and Russians, the first at Nawamaisto, in which about 120 Cossacks were made prisoners; the other at Cicchanova, which appears to have been warmly contested, but in which the French are also stated to have prevailed.

The Bamberg editor, on the authority of a letter from Augsburg, states Breslaw to have capitulated, but the date and particulars are not mentioned.
